MARBLES

Marble is the most extravagant Natural Stone. The beauty of which last for generations just like the great Taj Mahal the opulence of which echoes in heart.

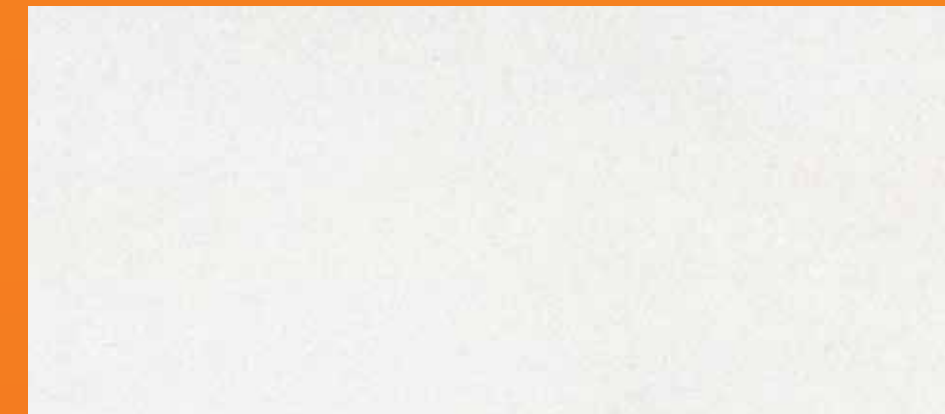

Marble is one of the most alluring stone on this planet. Through the centuries it has been a favourite medium for Roman and Greek sculptors, architects and has always been a cultural symbol of tradition and refined taste. Due to its durability, beauty and rich appearance, it has been used in some of the world's most awe-inspiring buildings. The Parthenon still stands today, a testament to the resilience and beauty of one of the most luxurious building material.

ONYX

Mystical Magical Onyx This exotic natural stone is about luxury and glamour. The transmitter of light. An exquisite and unique stone. Onyx has been used for centuries to adorn places of worship and ward off evil spirits. Some say it provides comfort, relieves stress, and calms the heart. The translucent beauty of this stone is a real head turner.

Limestone is very common in architecture, especially in Europe and North America. Many landmarks across the world, including the Great Pyramid are made of limestone. It is also long-lasting and stands up well to exposure.

Granite is signature rock of the planet Earth. Other rocky planets like Mercury, Venus and Mars are covered with basalt, but only Earth has this beautiful and interesting rock type. Granite is strong because it's mineral grains have grown tightly together during a very slow cooling period of Magma and the quartzs and feldspar that compose it are harder than steel. That makes granite desirable for building and ornamental purposes. Granite takes good polish and resists weathering very well.
